Rural Study Circles Sponsored By College

Headmaster Jos. McCulley
Announces Plan Of Rural Study

"For some years now, we, at Pickering college, have been interested in trying to find ways and means of being of more service to the folk resident in the rural community of North York," stated Headmaster Joseph McCulley in a statement issued this week. "Our Community Life Conferences have been a step in this direction. Other means have been adopted from time to time, and one of them — the wood-working and metal-working class begun last year — seems to be of sufficient value to be carried on again this year.

"We believe, however, that the time has come to extend our efforts and we are therefore sponsoring the organization of study circles throughout the community, which are coming together for weekly meetings. A monthly district meeting will be held at the college.

"The committee in charge is as follows: honorary chairman, Joseph McCulley; chairman, R. C. Swerdferger; secretary, Leonard Harman, King R. R. 3, (phone Aurora 89-14); members of committee, Mrs. W. H. Wilmut, E. H. Clarke, Mrs. Leonard Harman;

Appearing before the town council on Monday evening on behalf of the Citizens' Band, Marshall Lyons was promised the usual consideration when the council makes up its budget.

council, one representative from each group of people availing themselves of extension services.

"This committee will be in charge of the detailed arrangements. Matters of organization are in the hands of the secretary-treasurer, who will keep in touch with the school and myself in regard to developments. Comments with regard to the whole program should be made to Mr. Harman.

"I trust that this program may serve a need in the community, and that many will find in the study groups a means of increasing their knowledge of current social and economic movements. The program may be adapted or modified from time to time, as occasion demands or experience seems to dictate. Suggestions from any interested persons will be welcomed."

Mr. McCulley closed the statement with the words, "yours for service and co-operation."

NEW RISING STARS OF THE OPERA

The gifted young singers, Gwen Lambert (1) and Mary Davis (2), pictured above, will make their first appearance in opera when the Newmarket Opera Company opens with "Hansel and Gretel" at the town hall on Jan. 28. Miss Lambert, who takes the part of "Gretel," is well known for her concert and radio work. Miss Davis shares the part of the "Witch" with Mrs. A. N. Belugin, and the directors are enthused about the young star's ability. The part of "Hansel" rests in the capable hands of Jean Hunter, already well-known to Newmarket music-lovers. The much looked-forward-to opera is being directed by A. N. Belugin. Proceeds are to be given to the two Newmarket bands. Miss Lambert is the daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. H. E. Lambert and Miss Davis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Davis. Photo of Miss Davis by Ashley & Crippen, Toronto.

Operatic Cast Busy As Final Rehearsals Near

Newmarket Bands To Benefit From Proceeds Of Performance

When the new velvet curtain goes up for the first time in the town hall next Thursday, Newmarket citizens will be afforded a rare treat.

Operatic presentations are so complicated, require so much time, involve so many people and so much painstaking labor, that even one performance a year is somewhat more than the performers can stand. Hence it is almost two years since the last presentation of the Newmarket opera company, The Geisha.

Hansel and Gretel is first-rate entertainment for both young and old, much simpler in plot than most operas and consequently much easier to follow. It has rhythmic, melodious music, interspersed with interesting dialogue. All performers are local girls (with the exception of one single boy).

Some of the principals are appearing for the first time on the operatic stage and reveal surprising talent. Beautiful settings, lighting effects, and a large, well-rehearsed orchestra will add to the enjoyment of the show.

W. M. S. AUXILIARY WILL SEW HOME MISSION BALE

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society Auxiliary of Trinity United church was held last Thursday in the church school-room.

Mrs. M. B. Seldon, the president, presided. The devotional period was conducted by the president. Mrs. W. R. Stephens gave an article on "Jesus' attitude toward women and children."

The study book was given by Mrs. J. A. Maitland. Annual reports were received and plans made to proceed with sewing for the bale to be sent to home mission fields.

There was a good attendance, making a most encouraging beginning for the year 1937.

The public school children will be allowed to see the dress rehearsal on Jan. 27 at 7.30 p.m. The sale of reserved tickets will open at Patterson's drug store on Jan. 25. A brisk sale is anticipated, and it is expected that many holders of rush seat tickets will exchange them for accommodation in the reserved sections.

Golden Anniversary Couple Receive Friends Saturday

Have To Hold Reception In New Hall, So Many Expected

Mr. and Mrs. Amos H. Hill of 40 Queen St. West, Newmarket, celebrate their golden wedding on Saturday.

Owing to the number of guests expected, the reception is being held at the R. S. A. Bugle Band hall on Cedar St. The happy couple will receive between the hours of 3 and 5 p.m.

Miss Alice Sharp and Amos H. Hill were married in Pinkerton, Bruce county, by Rev. Mr. Eadie on Jan. 23, 50 years ago, and moved to Newmarket immediately afterwards.

Her husband had worked in various places around the town. Mrs. Hill told The Era. "First he was in the butcher business for himself," she said. "He also

Mr. and Mrs. Hill have five children. Walter, of Toronto, Ida (Mrs. Z. Harden), Wilmut, Elmer and George, all of Newmarket. Nineteen grandchildren complete the family.

Hear How Milk Tests Due To Phosphates Deficiency

Dairymen Ask Province To Establish Research
Department

"I do not say that it is possible to raise the butter-fat test of a good producer, but I do believe it is possible to raise the test of abnormally low testers," Ray Green, Oxford county agricultural representative, stationed at Woodstock, told the local branch of the Ontario Milk Producers Association in the Temperance hall on Tuesday evening.

Illustrating his talk with slides and diagrams, Mr. Green told of the results he had obtained in the banner dairy county of Oxford largely through feeding bone meal and di-sodium phosphate to herds whose food had been previously deficient in phosphates.

"Below 3.2 per cent. butter-fat I consider too low," Mr. Green said, showing diagrammatically how the herds treated last summer had come up in their tests remarkably. Many cows showed an increase of one per cent. during a period when other herds showed an average increase of only 4 per cent.

So impressed were the dairy men present that they passed a resolution to be forwarded to Hon. Duncan Marshall, provincial minister of agriculture, and Dr. G. I. Christie, head of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, urging the establishment of a research department at the college to investigate the relationship of mineral deficiency to poor milk and to animal health.

"A cow giving 10,000 pounds of milk in a year is sending 17 pounds of calcium and 21 pounds of phosphorus off the farm," was one of the interesting statements made by Mr. Green.

NEWMARKET BOY GETS SIX MONTHS

"I knew all the time we were planning it and even when walking down the street to where he was that I couldn't go through with it," 18-year-old Gerald Preston told Magistrate Browne in county police court on Monday.

Preston, who had pleaded guilty last week to a charge of holding up Albert Skelton on Charles St., was sentenced to six months imprisonment and three months indeterminate.

"If I hadn't taken into consideration his age and previous good record, he would go to penitentiary," the magistrate said.

A juvenile, with Preston in the attempted hold-up, was dealt with in juvenile court.

of phosphates to dairy cattle both through feeding and through putting phosphates on the land.

"In our investigations we found that where the soil of a farm was low in phosphates, the milk was low in butter-fat," he stated. "Farmers who had for years been putting phosphates on the land had good tests."

In England, Mr. Green said, a farm lease requires the lessee to put a certain amount of phosphates on the land each year.

Feeding of bone meal improved both the butter-fat and the milk flow, Mr. Green's experiments last summer showed. Similar experiments carried out elsewhere brought similar results, he stated.

Where a herd was very much run down Mr. Green fed a combination of di-sodium phosphate and bone meal. He gave each animal one, dessertspoonful of di-sodium phosphate and two

M.O.H. Warns Of Danger Of Influenza, Urges Caution

Go To Bed Promptly Is Best Way To Avoid Trouble,
M. O. H. Says

"A warning has been sent out by the department of health that the province is likely to be invaded by an epidemic of influenza of a moderately severe type," Dr. J. H. Wesley, M. O. H., stated today.

"As this disease is very different from an ordinary cold and as we do not know the cause of it, it is difficult to take any short-cut to prevent it," Dr. Wesley said.

"School children are very susceptible to it and all persons owe it to themselves and the public in general to remain in complete isolation from the onset till convalescence has been well established and the danger of complications is over."

"Influenza is a highly contagious, infectious disease, which occurs in epidemics and spreads with extraordinary rapidity. It is remarkable for the sudden onset, usually with fever, marked prostration, severe aching pains in the back and extremities, redness of the eyes, rapidly progressing into an inflammation of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. The disease in a mild form runs its course in a short time, but when an afflicted individual neglects to take proper care of himself, he is exposed to complications which are always very much more serious in their effect than the original disease."

"There is no specific cure for influenza. Most important in the treatment are: (1) absolute confinement in bed from the onset; (2) plenty of fluids."

FIREMEN VISIT MAIN ST. HOME

Six short blasts on the fire whistle on Monday afternoon sent Newmarket firemen on the run to the home of J. W. Fierheller, 163 Main St.

Cause of the blaze was not definitely determined, but it is believed that some mortar had come out from between the bricks of the chimney, causing a smoldering of the timber in the wall on the second story.

Lack of draft prevented a more serious conflagration, but because of its position the blaze was a difficult one to extinguish. To bring the fire under control it was necessary to take away part of the roof surrounding the chimney and to apply chemicals from the inside of the dwelling.

VISIT HENRY FORD'S MUSEUM VILLAGE

While on a recent holiday trip to Detroit, Lansing, Saginaw and New York, Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Duffy visited Henry Ford's museum village outside Detroit.

Mr. Ford has brought mediaeval homes from Europe and set them up in his "Greenfield Village," Mr. Duffy related. Among the "curios" Mr. Ford has collected are the house Lincoln was born in, the school he attended, and the blood-stained chair in which he was assassinated.

YOUNG MEN'S CLUB PLANNED

Town Council Promises To Help In Equipping New Hall

Promise of a contribution toward the equipment of the new R. S. A. Bugle Band hall was obtained by Roy Rhinehart, Frank Smith and Wm. Andrews, band sponsors, from the town council on Monday evening.

"With the 65 members we now have, we were forced to have a hall of our own," Mr. Andrews told the council. "We have $1,500 in equipment, which we have paid for ourselves."

"We hope to get enough equipment to form a young men's club, and to keep the young men entertained. We will thus be able to keep these young men off the street."

"We have had a very successful week, with a very generous response, but we are still in the hole. We are here to see if you can help us financially."

"How much do you need?" asked Councillor Arthur D. Evans.

"If you could give us $200, we would be able to carry out our plans," Mr. Andrews said. "We have never been to the council before for assistance."

"When I heard of your undertaking, I was struck with your courage," said Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales. "I think the council should help you so long as you carry on the work as you have."

"When we budget, we will bear your request in mind," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

"We feel that if we receive this grant, we will be able to carry on without coming to the council again," Mr. Andrews said. "We feel very strongly on this point. It is easy enough to create another baby for the taxpayers to pay for, but we take pride in being self-supporting."

society during the Christmas season. From the number of letters received, it was evident that much appreciation and gratitude was felt by the mothers and children who received Christmas boxes.

Plans were made for the 1937 work. The ladies are all anxious to start sewing and knitting. Unfortunately the treasury is almost depleted.

The society is asking any of the kind friends who so willingly helped them in 1936 and who are again willing to help the society to carry on in 1937, to kindly communicate with any of the following: Mrs. Howard Cane, Mrs. P. Todd, Mrs. C. E. VanderVoort, or Mrs. A. MacKay.

Pastor Asked To Complete Term, Church Receipts Up

George D. Wark Re-elected
Secretary Of Trinity
United Church

Rev. J. H. Wells, invited to the pulpit of Trinity United church for a year, has been asked to stay for the full pastorate, it was announced by George D. Wark, church secretary, at the annual congregational meeting last evening.

"We pledge you our very best and I am quite sure that we will have your co-operation," Mr. Wells said, in expressing acceptance on behalf of himself and Mrs. Wells.

The congregation passed a resolution of appreciation to be sent to Aubrey Davis and Elmer Davis, estate executors, of the bequest of $10,000 from the late Hon. E. J. Davis to the church.

The following elders were elected: five years, S. R. James, S. W. King, C. S. McCauley, Andrew Stouffer; three years, R. E. Manning, W. H. S. Cane. Stewards elected were: five years, Wilford Duffy, Garfield Farran, Frank Bothwell, Herman Gilroy; three years, Morley Rowland; one year, Jack Hamilton. George

D. Wark was unanimously re-elected secretary of the church.

Eighteen were received into the congregation and 25 were removed by death or removal from the town during the year, Wesley Brooks, clerk of the session, reported. The total membership is 606. Baptisms were 16, marriages 15, burials 13.

Collections during 1936 were $631 more than in 1935, J. R. Y. Broughton, the treasurer of the church, reported. Total receipts for local expenses were $5,650, $372 in excess of expenditures. Receipts for missionary and maintenance purposes were $3,000.

Excellent reports were made on behalf of the various departments of the church.

Rev. Mr. Wells presided over the meeting.

Barnyard Bossy Given Due Credit, Ubiquity Deplored

High Test Of Fast Gwillimbury Holstein Breeder Cited By Dr. Wesley

Report has it that a group of Chicago men are trying to secure "social recognition for the plain cow," presumably for the purpose of getting a better price for her or her milk.

Ex-Reeve Norman McMurchy of King, commenting on this report, went on record this week as saying that the slightest barnyard bossy is sometimes a better producer than her purebred cousin.

The Era asked Dr. J. H. Wesley, an experienced owner of dairy cattle, his opinion, and here it is. "The amount and quality of milk a cow will produce depends more on the care and feeding than on the breeding," Dr. Wesley said.

"Twenty years ago I contemplated switching from Jerseys to Holsteins, but after getting the butter-fat test of a number of show herds of Holsteins at the Canadian National Exhibition, and finding the average yield was not over two per cent., I stayed with the Jerseys. Today it is quite common to find Holstein cows giving 4 per cent. butter-fat milk. This marvellous result has been accomplished by the care the dairyman has given his herd, the selection of the feed and, most of all, by the careful selection of the best or highest testers for breeding purposes. This speaks 20 years of progress

MEN WILL BE BOYS

A recent incident, when two boys of this town tried to emulate a movie hold-up, has set many of us to wondering why boys will be boys. In writing of "Ben Lindsey: the kids' judge," in his autobiography, the late Lincoln Steffens, famous U. S. newspaperman, makes the interesting suggestion that the actions of men and women, just like those of boys and girls, are the product of upbringing and circumstances. Steffens tells how the Denver, Colorado, judge came to realize that the boys and girls he was dealing with were human beings, not "criminals," and how he used to investigate their home circumstances. We say that the Steffens suggestion is interesting because it leads us to the conclusion that the courts which deal with adult criminals should use the methods of our juvenile courts. Juvenile court judges are not usually lawyers, but humanitarians, and they try to remedy what is wrong rather than to punish.

Strong Bad Boys

Steffens writes: "Ben Lindsey discovered about children what I was discovering about men: that there are no bad boys and girls, and no good ones either. There are only strong boys and girls and weak boys and girls. The bad ones whom the police were really afraid of, the boys and girls who did very bad things, who committed robberies and hold-ups, rode the brakes of trains, and dared to do bold criminal acts—they were so strong that, when Lindsey put it up to them to control themselves and do what he called 'good things,' they were able to respond and deliver the goods. They could take their fares and their commitment papers and go alone, with no cop to guard them, to the reform school. The good boys and girls could not do that. They were either little prigs or weaklings who were led into crime by their leaders, the bad boys."

Never Heard Christianity Preached

Similarly Steffens looked at men. There was always a reason, he said, why friendly, decent men, either in the name of crime, or business, or politics, did anti-social things. The reason was often economic. Admiring strong bad men more than weak good men, Lincoln Steffens wrote: "Jesus had discovered and declared, for example, the worthlessness of the good people. He said that he could not save the righteous, only sinners. . . . I have never heard Christianity, as Jesus taught it in the New Testament, preached to the Christians. But I did see it practiced, in politics. It was an element in every reform movement that won the support of the people. I saw it applied by individuals to bad men, women, and children. I began to try it myself; and it worked. Christianity, unpreached and untaught and unlearned among the righteous, works wonders still among the sinners."

A CHURCHMAN'S MESSAGE

In these days of flagging interest in the church, it is refreshing to encounter an enthusiastic believer. Rev. Gordon A. Sisco, new secretary of the United Church of Canada, writes in the New Outlook: "I believe in the Christian church with all my heart. . . . It is in reality a divine creation, the custodian of civilization, a mystical entirety which is greater than the sum of its individual members. To be sure Christ is greater than the church, and there have been times in history when he has had to go outside the church to forward his kingdom. Yet, on the whole, his life has flowed through an institution which has spanned the centuries and into which as children we were born and reared. . . . The only way you can meet such a thrust as communism is to create an order of life that gives material security from high spiritual motives and convictions. . . . The menacing challenge of the totalitarian state, which breeds war and regimentation, must be met by a totalitarian Christianity which seeks to bring all phases of life under the sovereign sway of Christ."

What Good Communism, Fascism?

This seems to us a splendid statement of purpose for the Christian church. This statement gives recognition to the strength and points to weaknesses of communism and fascism. There are Canadians who are enthusiastic communists and there are Canadians who are enthusiastic fascists. It is worth-while that we should look to see what good our fellow citizens see in these political faiths.

Good Thing For Russia

It is popular today to say that we don't like communism and we don't like fascism, but that of the two we prefer communism. If we think carefully, we may come to the conclusion that Russian communism, apart from the use of force as a method of gaining and holding control of government, is a good thing for Russia. Communism has reduced hunger and illiteracy in Russia and has brought hope to the great majority of Russians. If we forget about their threats to the peace and security of other peoples, we might think of German fascism and Italian fascism as good things in Germany and Italy, for German fascism has restored the pride of the German people and Italian fascism has probably improved the economic lot of the Italian people.

Communism's Uses

Fascism, however, could not possibly be made democratic, whereas communism can conceivably become democratic and still remain communism. That is why Canadians like communism better than they like fascism. Canadians are democrats. We want a vote, to cast or to withhold, or to bargain with. It is possible that either fascism or communism, putting everybody to work, might end poverty in Canada, but fascism would take from us liberty, democracy and peacefulness. Canadians look on communism more kindly. A democratic Canadian communism could leave us our political liberty and give many Canadians economic security for the first time. Communism might or might not raise the average standard of living. We guess that it would. Canadian communism would be so different from Russian communism that we would call it by a different name. We might find ourselves calling it "the kingdom of God on earth," or perhaps use the new United Church secretary's phrase, "material security from high spiritual motives and convictions." For the present, let us not look too harshly at the attempt of the Russian people to pull themselves out of the mire of poverty and ignorance. Perhaps history will look on the Russian scheme as an instance of Christ going "outside the church to forward his kingdom."

PRICE OF WHEAT

The price of No. 1 northern wheat at Fort William on Dec. 31 was $1.29 per bushel compared to 84¢ cents a year previous, making an increase of 44¢ cents per bushel for the 12 months, Searle Grain Company tells us, and then lists the factors that have tended to increase the price of wheat and the factors that have tended to decrease the price. This is very interesting reading. We are not in northern York county to any great extent dependent for our living on sales of wheat, but it is true of other farm products, as it is true of wheat, that their price depends largely on worldwide factors.

Farmers As Internationalists

To us it is fascinating to read this list of happenings in the U. S., in Argentina, in Spain, in Germany, in Australia, India, Poland, raising and lowering the price of Canadian wheat. It is an education. The factors, which we propose to list in detail, are economic, political, meteorological, practically all outside our control. It is a compelling argument for an interest in international affairs, for a League of Nations, for some form of world state. Farmers should be the most ardent supporters of proposals for a more harmonious and co-operative world order. How absurd is talk of nationalism, conquests, colonies. No nation can live unto itself, or unto colonies. All parts of the world are being drawn more closely together by the rapid advance of communications. Here are the factors listed:

Factors That Have Tended To Raise Wheat Prices During The Year

The price of gold per ounce, at London, rose slightly during the year from 141s. 2d to 141s. 7d. British wholesale commodity price indices averaged a rise during the year of about 10 per cent.

United States wholesale commodity price indices averaged a rise during the year of about 9 per cent.

Broomhall's world wheat visible 143 million bushels less than a year ago.

Heavy wheat sales by Canadian Wheat Board reduces surplus.

Total of world wheat crops was about 200 million bushels less than world consumptive requirements.

Very deficient wheat crops in important wheat exporting countries—Canada, U. S. A., Argentina. Deficient crops of coarse grains in United States and Canada.

World "carry-over," or surplus, about 200 million bushels less than normal.

Owing to drought, 1936-37, Australian crop conditions less than average.

Many unfavorable early reports on European winter crop for harvest in 1936.

Large world armament expenditures increase employment, hence demands for wheat.

Fear of inflation in United States increases price of commodities, hence foodstuffs, including wheat.

United States winter wheat prospects unfavorable in some areas.

Spanish civil war accentuates fear of war spreading in Europe.

Decided lack of subsoil moisture in the United States and Western Canadian spring wheat belts, and in parts of the United States winter wheat area.

Large demands for wheat from certain European countries, and rumors these nations stocking up as war feared.

Italy purchases heavily Argentine, Australian and United States Pacific wheat.

Food shortage reported in Germany—expected this country will import large quantities of wheat.

Broomhall increases world wheat and flour import requirements to 567 million.

Indicated world wheat supplies smallest since 1927.

Factors That Have Tended To Lower Wheat Prices During The Year

World's foreign exchange situation unsettled, hence importing countries experience difficulty in securing foreign exchange for wheat purchases.

Sanctions imposed against Italy decrease shipments of goods to that country, hence decrease her purchases of export wheat.

Good exportable wheat surplus in Balkans.

Continental Europe still financially restricted, hence rising wheat and flour prices curtail purchases.

Substantial wheat shipments from Balkans and India.

Indian wheat crops sown under favorable conditions.

European demands for wheat restricted by trade barriers.

France, Belgium and other gold block countries devalue their currencies.

Argentina abandons minimum price to farmers on wheat and flax.

Argentine 1936-37 wheat crop officially estimated at 250 million bushels.

Argentine estimates for oats, barley, rye and flax also above last year.

Favorable rains aid germination in northern India.

United States Department of Agriculture reports largest winter wheat acreage on record, with indicated winter wheat production slightly over 600 million bushels.

Higher wheat prices induced many countries to export some wheat.

Argentina, India, Poland, and some others increase shipments of corn, barley, rye, rice and oats.

International shipments of fruit, vegetables, and other foodstuffs increase.

Estimates for the year 1937-38 as presented by the dominion finance minister, call for $405,046,000, an increase of $17,102,000 over last year. Expenditures for defense and aviation account for the bulk of the increase.

"It has been proven conclusively that sea foods, properly prepared, have unusual health-giving power," declares Premier A. L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia. "Palatable and easily digested, they help the human body to resist disease and they promote the growth of children. They possess a great deal more protein than either chicken or beef and provide the best balanced flesh foods available. As to cost—they are relatively inexpensive."

"Nevertheless it is said that the average Canadian family is content with perhaps one meal of fish a week. Our leading dietitians deplore this apparent blindness to the intrinsic value of fish foods. For this reason we heartily welcome the present press campaign to encourage the consumption of fish inaugurated by Hon. J. E. Michaud in his capacity as minister of fisheries at Ottawa."

"Deep sea fishing is a hazardous calling. Our Canadian fishermen imperil their lives day after day in order to make available a constant supply of wholesome and delicious sea foods. These hardy and courageous men form a highly important element in our population. For their sake, for your own sake, for the sake of your family, patronize their products. Serve more sea fish and remember that every day may be fish day."

School Notes

TRUTHFULNESS
(By Pedagogue)

It comes in the experience of nearly every parent and teacher to deal with cases of untruthfulness on the part of a child.

It is very often a reflection of the method employed by parent or teacher in dealing with the individual case. The common question is, "Did you do that?" or "Who did that?" when a misdeed has been committed.

Perhaps it was an accident and the offender is afraid of punishment, knowing that the judgment will probably be hasty.

It so often happens that the child doesn't have a fair trial because of haste and erroneous conclusions. Thus he or she is driven to hasty defense and consequent untruthfulness.

Isn't it much wiser to refrain from encouraging this by avoiding hasty questions and awaiting conclusive evidence before

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

"CLOCKS"

When you opened the door of my grandfather's home, you faced a long hall. At the end of this, and a little to the left, stood a grandfather's clock.

No matter how eager I was to find my cousins; no matter how urgent my errand might be, I had to stop and try to make friends with that clock.

Our clocks at home just ticked away—they were friendly and I was glad to be able to look at their pleasant white faces and have them tell me what time it was. I looked often for I was at the age when time telling was a novelty.

But with grandfather's grandfather's clock all was different.

It towered above me and it had a solemn face, like pictures of the man in the moon. I always felt it wanted to tell me something, but I never felt it liked me.

It always cleared its throat before it told the hours, and then it spoke in slow, solemn tones. It had, more than any clock I've ever met since, a sense of its own importance.

It made me feel small and of not much use and, every time it struck, I felt I ought to be doing something I wasn't doing.

After 96 years, the old home has passed into other hands, and I always forget to ask if the clock was left there. It taught me that clocks have personalities and are friends or enemies, according to the way we use them.

Just at present we have three clocks living with us. They order us about and rule us with a rod of iron. The kitchen clock, I think, must, in a former incarnation, have been a slave driver.

It seems to tick faster than any other clock I ever met. Every time you look at it, it is saying, "Do this, do that! Hurry up, you'll be late!" till you feel it would be a decided relief to throw it out of doors.

With it staring you in the face, what chance have you to snatch up a paper or magazine and find out, to your amazement, perhaps, what wonderful things you can do to your house with silver paper and brilliant paints.

You are just having a glorious time, putting scarlet paint (in imagination) on the inside of your cupboards, when you glance up and meet the accusing eye of the clock.

Down goes the paper and you sneak off to the hated dusting, and try to imagine yourself independent of clocks.

It isn't only in the daytime that clocks haunt you—like ghosts. They whisper in the night.

Every right but Saturday night I arm myself with an alarm clock—alarm well wound and, as a rule, set correctly.

"As a rule," said I, but one night when the working day began an hour earlier than at present, I heard the alarm, hopped out of bed, got breakfast, and had the assembled family peacefully consuming toast and coffee, when I looked at the kitchen clock. Horrified, I gazed, nor could I look away.

"Are you sick," said my mother, while my better-half in alarm, went for a glass of water.

"It's the clock—the clock!" said I, "look at it!"

They looked and a stricken silence fell—it was 4.30, and we had nearly finished breakfast!

But most mornings, it does its job well and I try to smother its clear call, although I don't clasp it to me and go peacefully to sleep again, as a friend used to.

But if I wake in the night and don't hear its familiar tick—there's trouble.

"What time can it be, have we overslept, has a burglar made off with it?"

That's the worst of making an intimate friend of a clock. You can't get away from it and, if you do, you're upset.

One morning I woke — what was wrong — then I knew, no ticking near me. I flew up, grabbed a dressing gown and started downstairs, when suddenly a thought struck me—it was Sunday.

I crawled meekly and thankfully back to bed, disgusted with myself and the clock, but mostly myself.

After all, the clocks are our friends, they keep us from mistake, they save us steps, they do a thousand things for us.

I have a few verses which I had published in a magazine a year or two ago, with which I'd like to close.

We have three clocks that live with us.

Each has its proper place, They stand alert, yet with no fuss, They set the household pace.

The parlor clock—a lady fair In cream and gold array, Ticks gently, lest her voice impair The peace, at close of day.

A haughty grandee is the clock That stands within the hall; His voice is firm, as "toe, tic, toe," He says, to one and all.

The kitchen clock, a little maid In blue and white, is gay; Her nervous tic toe sounds afraid She'll lose the time of day.

So lady fair, and maiden gay, And gallant grave and tall, They've timed our work, and timed our play, They're friends, not clocks at all!

Mr. Pecker Cuts It Short

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

gets his name from his very prominent white wing bars.

"My wife is not dressed like I am," said Mr. Crossbill. "She has a dull, yellowish dress. As a matter of fact, they say we are somewhat like the Goldfinches in our habits."

"Where do you build your nests?" asked Hattie.

"In evergreen trees," was the Crossbill's reply. "We make nice nests of twigs and grasses lined with moss. However, we Crossbills don't necessarily build them in any special month, but almost any time from January to September and we don't stick to any special place for nesting either. After all, I say, why be like everyone else?"

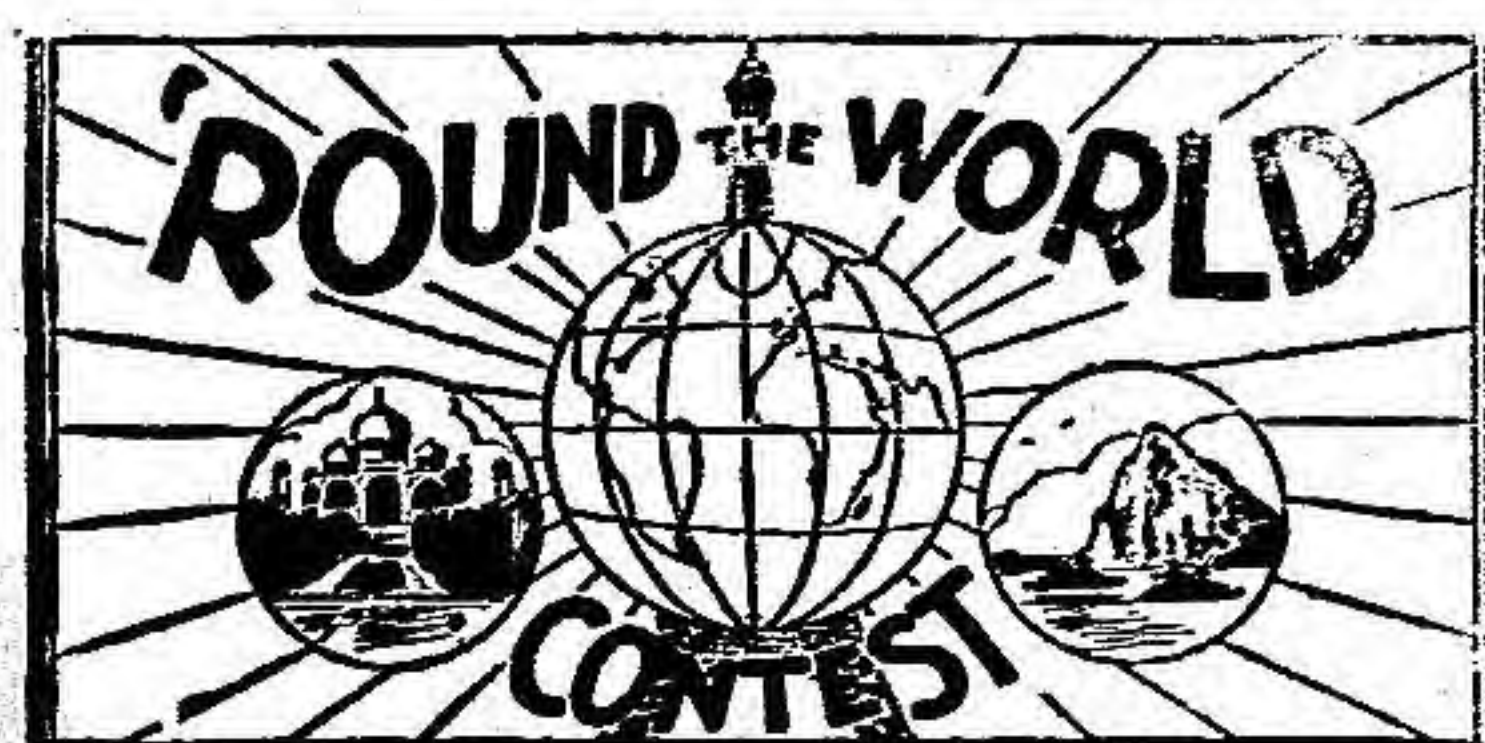

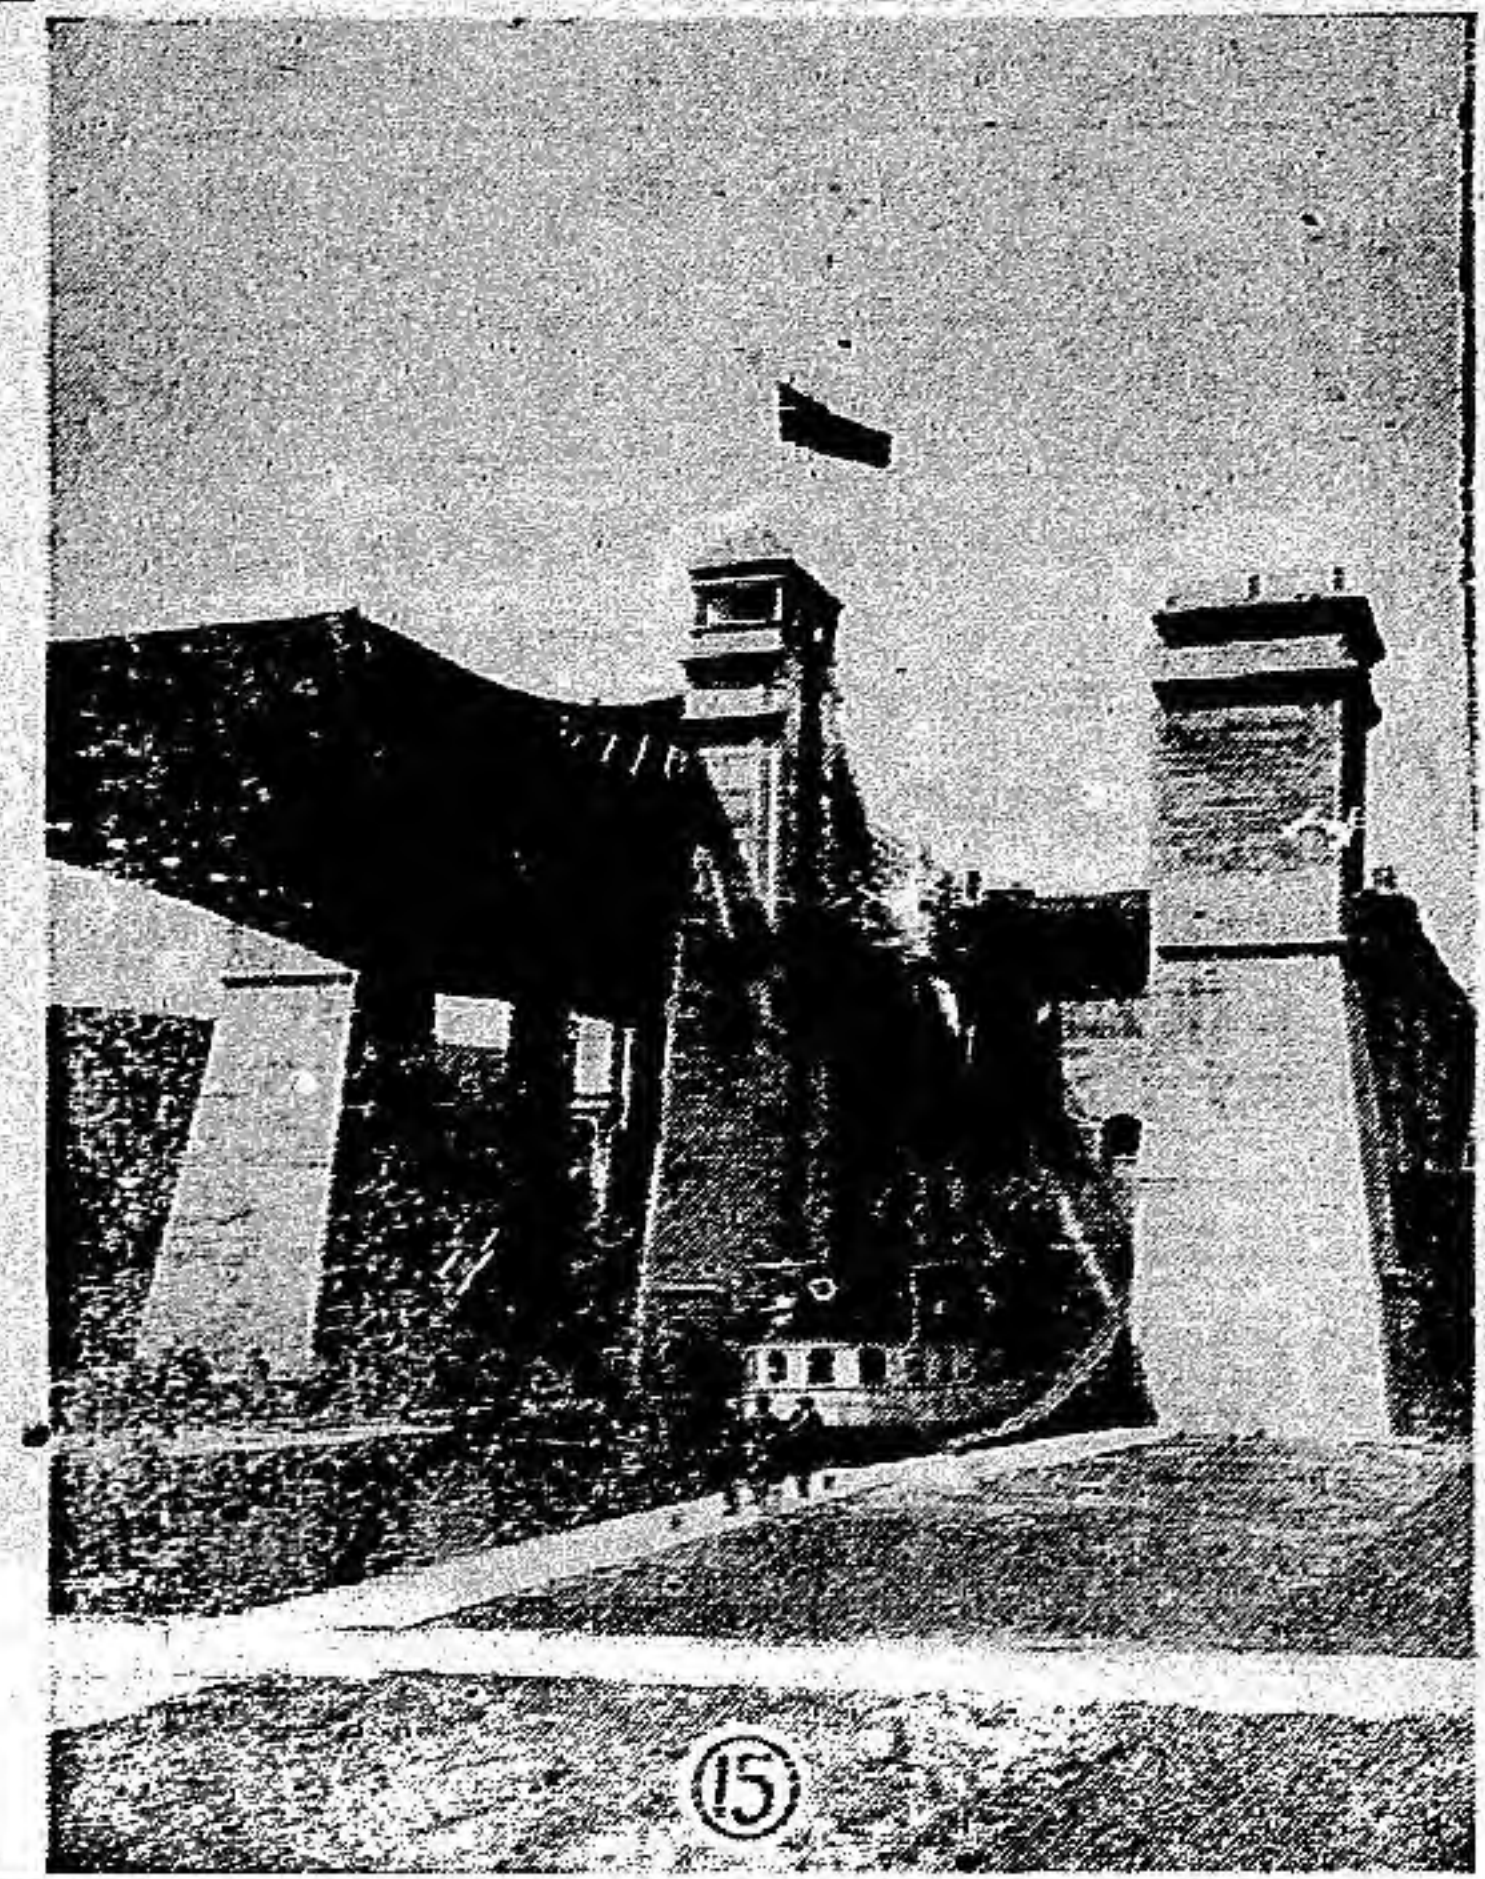

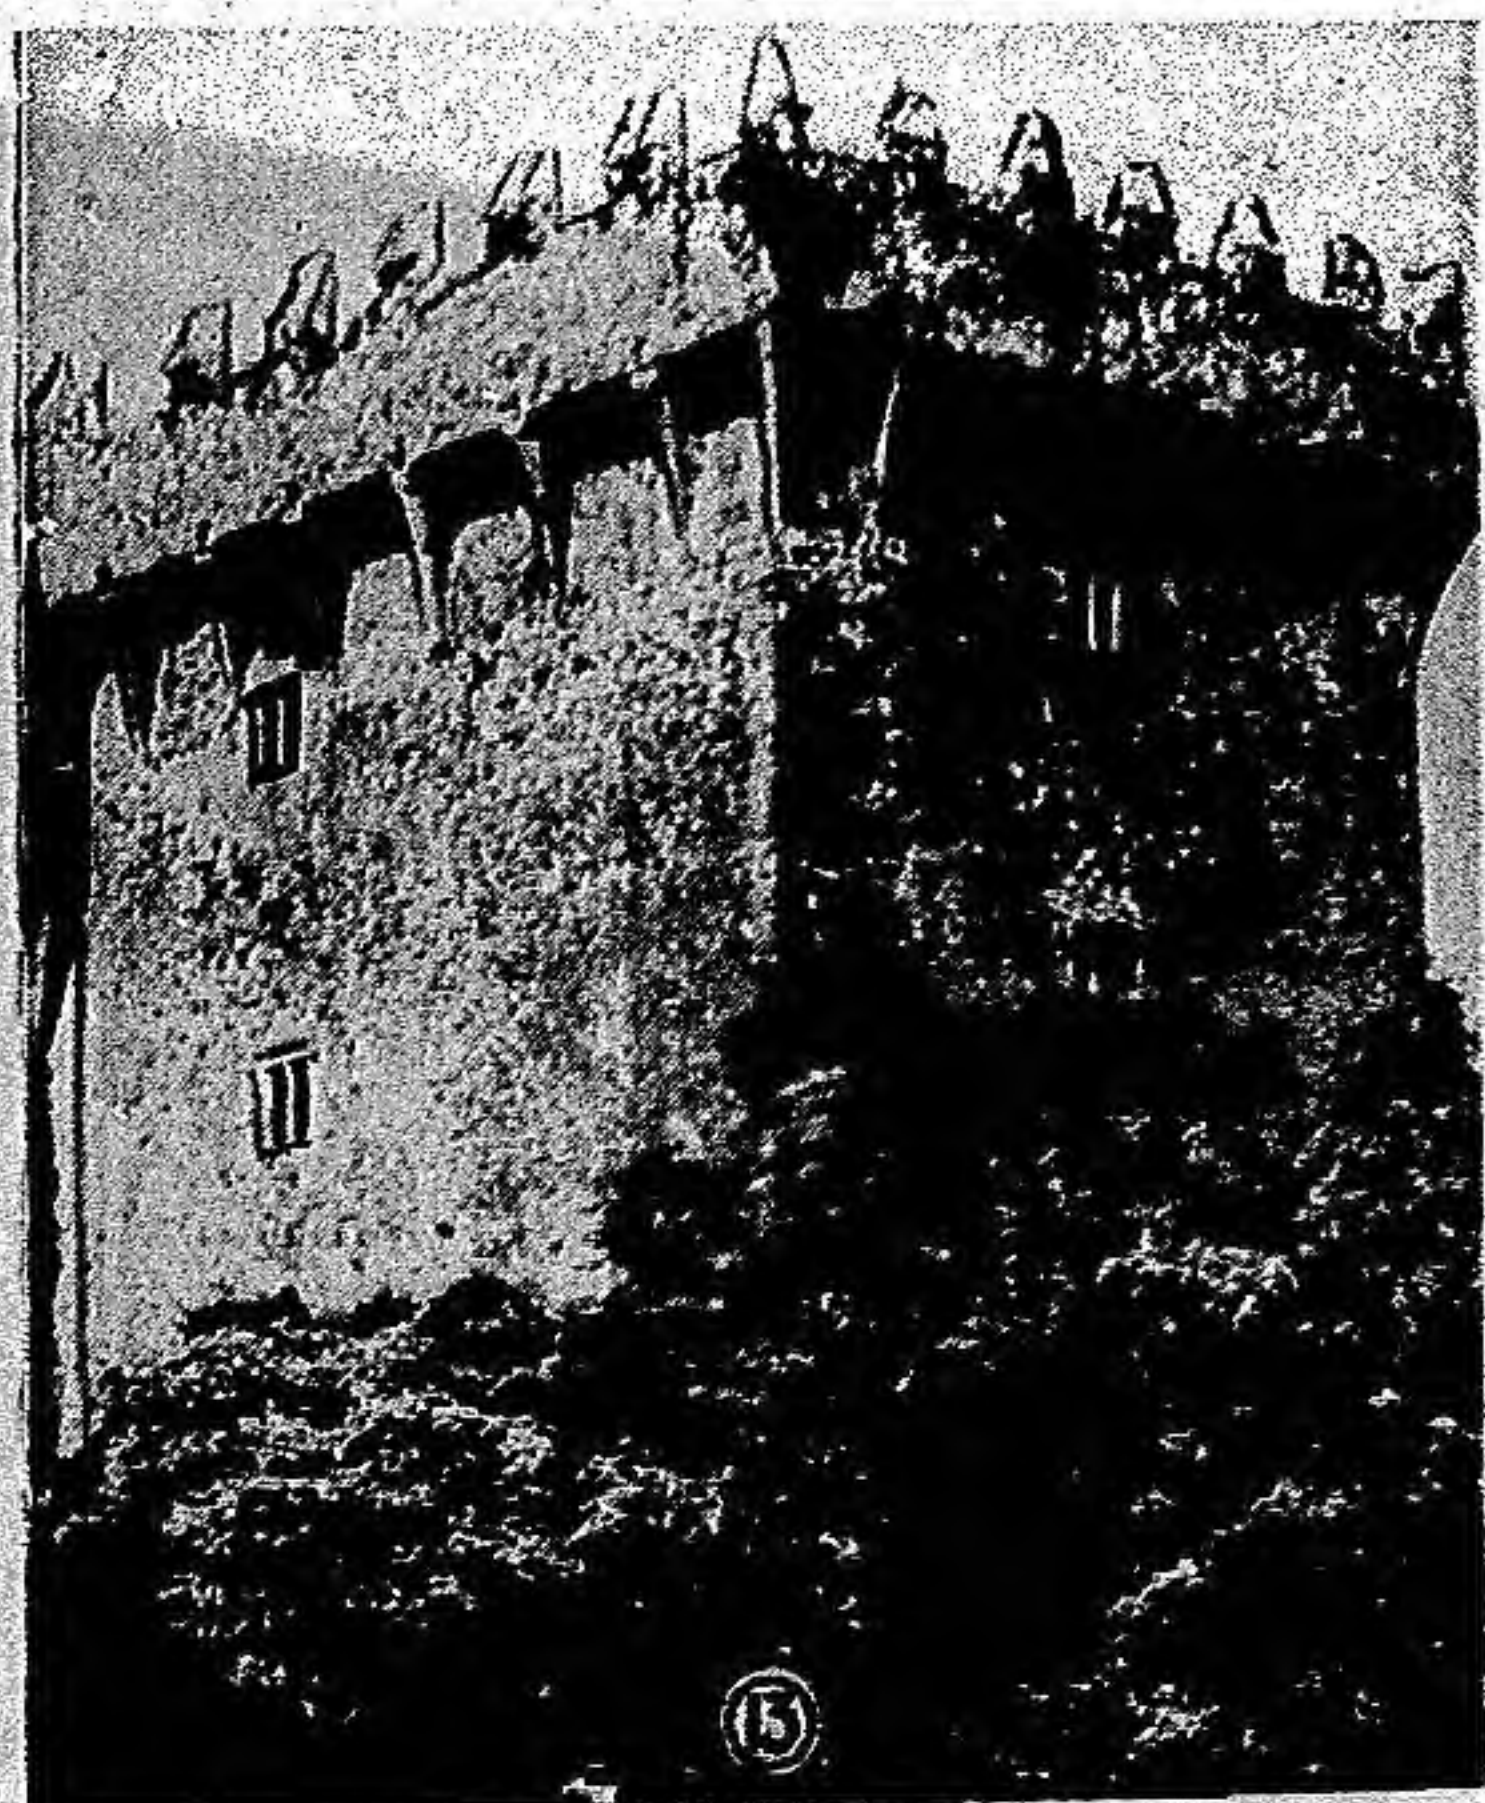

"Mr. Crossbill's cousin, the Red Crossbill, as he is often called, is sometimes seen around here too," Pecker broke in. "They are very much alike, but Mr. American Crossbill is a much darker, bricker red and he has no wing bars. The ladies and children are greenish or yellowish instead of red. His song is a low twittering, and he has a short whistle something like a flute—very similar to your own musical efforts, my dear Mr. White-winged Crossbill."

"Well, my friends," added Mr. Pecker, "I could, of course, carry on my remarks much further, but I don't want to embarrass our guest. Then, too I always think it's so much better to learn from actual observation of nature, than to listen to lectures. I know that's how I picked up my wide knowledge."

"Hurrah!" whispered one young Chickadee to his Nuthatch friend. "Mr. Pecker has put on the brakes. Let's get going."

"I cannot find my evening gown," The angry maiden fretted. But she grew angrier when Junior said

"Maybe a moth hath et it."

ST. ANDREW'S CLEARS DEBTS

The annual meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church took place Monday evening, the congregation well represented.

Dr. D. McIntyre occupied the chair and Archie Mair was elected secretary. Reports were read from the Sunday-school, Y. W. A., Jr. Auxiliary, Busy Bees Mission Band, W. M. S., Woman's Association, managers, session, budget, Y. P. S., and choir.

Each reported encouraging progress. The Sunday-school doubled its membership. The various departments of the church disbursed a total of $4,554.64. The managers paid off all floating indebtedness.

The improvement committee decorated the Sunday-school room, installed an electric stove, and put in new cupboards. One hundred and forty-five volumes of books were received for the library from the estate of a former pastor, Rev. John Brown.

The session reported 12 new members added to the church, making a total of 259 to be reported to the general assembly. Mention was made of the loss by death of the late Mrs. James Ingram, who was, for many years, an honored member of the church. The pastor conducted 16 funerals, married eight couples, and baptized two adults.

The choir maintained its excellent standard under the efficient leadership of Mrs. George Wood. The Y. P. S. donated 35 Bibles to the church. Seven members of the Junior congregation received prizes for regular attendance. The Manse prize of a Bible was awarded to Alfred Douglas for highest attendance.

Len. Little, Mr. Ruddock and Miss Isabelle Rowland were elected as new managers to the board. Harry McGhee was elected Sunday-school treasurer and Jack Malcolm, secretary.

A special vote of thanks was given to the improvement committee, for their gratuitous services to Archie Mair for his faithfulness as superintendent of the Sunday-school, also to Len. Little for his assistance and splendid co-operation in the

In closing, the pastor thanked all the departments of the church for the efficient way in which they carried on the work during the year, and then closed the meeting with a prayer that God's richest blessing would rest upon the members and adherents of the church, and that God would make each one a blessing in the community.

A letter from H. E. Lambert, manager of the Bank of Toronto, stated that the proposal to change the town account from bank to bank was a “distinct shock.”

“Years ago it was not unusual for municipal accounts to be made political footballs at every change of the council, until conditions reached such an unpleasant outcome that the banks themselves took a hand over the managers,” the letter stated. In view of his efforts to be a leader in community service in the town, Mr. Lambert said that it would be unfair to himself personally to remove the town account.

“No better rates can be given the municipality than those now being enjoyed,” the letter stated.

AWARD GIVEN YORK SPEAKER

Thomas Sheridan, County Champion, Places Second

Thomas Sheridan, York county champion, was awarded second place in the semi-finals of the public speaking contest held at Pickering college on Saturday. His subject was “Battlements.” First place was taken by Wilda Pinkney, Belfountain, winner of the Peel county public school oratorical contest. She spoke on “The Birth of a Nation.”

Douglas Dawes, of Hillsdale, Simcoe county champion, was third. His subject was “Music in the Schools.”

Commending the contestants on their presentation of their subject, Joseph McCulley, headmaster of Pickering college and one of the judges, criticized those who had instructed them, for a choice of subject on which contestants were unable to speak with authority.

“It was the impression of the judges,” Mr. McCulley stated, “that the contestants were aided in the preparation of their speeches by teachers or adults. We cannot believe that pupils of this age can speak with any degree of authority on the subjects they have chosen. The speeches were memorized and the gestures were obviously instructed.”

Mr. McCulley believed that the pupils should be instructed to be natural and to think on their feet.

The speaking contests, The Era learned from the department of agriculture, under whose auspices they are held, are conducted for the purpose of giving children platform experience. Awards are given for manner of delivery rather than on material contained in the speeches.

The letter stated that the bank had reduced the interest rate on the town's account in recent months without request.

Stating that the province will continue relief on the same basis as in 1936, Hon. David Croll, minister of public welfare, by letter urged the council “to continue your campaign to eliminate from the lists all those who have no legitimate claim on public assistance.”

CHEROKEE CLUB MEETS AT HOME OF MRS. C. S. GILBERT

The Cherokee club started its activities for the year 1937 with a well-attended meeting at the home of Mrs. W. H. Eves, Prospect Ave., on Friday evening, Jan. 8.

The new president, Mrs. Max Smith, conducted the meeting, which proved to be a very interesting business session with many splendid suggestions for the coming year.

The program was very good. Mrs. I. Harris played two numbers in her usual pleasing manner which were well received.

Mrs. Hope read Edgar Guest's poem, “Life's Canvas.” Mrs. Morrison's and Miss Goldsmith's piano duet was much appreciated.

Mrs. Jackson read a very fine paper on current events, which brought out many points of interest to all.

At the close of the meeting the hostess and her committee served dainty refreshments.

The Cherokee club meets on Friday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. S. Gilbert, Prospect Ave. You are asked to come and spend a profitable evening for yourself and, through your presence and your efforts, may others see the sunshine and cheer that is spread by this club of which the motto is, “I have spoken well.”

BARNYARD BOSSY

“But no high producing cow, whether she is pedigreed or not, will maintain her record of production very long on barnyard care, and, on the other hand, there are many unregistered cows of mixed breeding that rank high in production, and the amount of production will bear a fair ratio to the care and feed she gets.”

“It seems a shame there should be so many so-called ‘barnyard’ cows. It indicates a lack of the farmer's interest in keeping the breed of his cattle pure, and if he is careless in their breeding, he is, as a rule, not a good feeder or a good care-taker. The first cross may be all right, but the second will not be so good, and so it goes. We all like to see a good, purebred cow of any breed much better than the ‘barnyard bossy.’”

“A well-known breeder of Holstein cattle, Walter Haines, living in East Gwillimbury, has a fine herd of the breed. His last butter-fat test for the herd was 3.5 per cent, and he has different cows that test 4.2 per cent, but of course the highest testers are not the biggest producers when it comes to quantity.”

desserts—confuls of bone meal a day, he said.

“One herd, which freshened in the spring, was fed bone meal from August on and gave more milk in October than in July,” Mr. Green said.

Mr. Green told of instances in which the phosphate feeding had built up cows from a run-down, diseased condition to normal health. Sterility too might be due to mineral deficiency, he said.

“Sterility may be due to a lack of calcium, phosphorus or iodine, or to a lack of one of the vitamins,” Mr. Green suggested. If providing minerals does not cure the trouble, the dairyman should feed cod liver oil, he said, using six pounds of cod liver oil to the ton of bran or cornmeal, first mixing the six pounds of cod liver oil with 44 pounds of the bran or cornmeal and then making it up to the ton.

In speaking of sterility, Mr. Green said that the mineral or vitamin deficiency caused the ovum or embryo to be absorbed, so that the cow could keep up her milk, or the embryo to be aborted when too small to be noticed by the dairyman.

Mr. Green said to use steamed bone meal, and cautioned farmers not to feed the phosphates they put on the land, as these phosphates will damage the cows' teeth.

Newmarket Ties Markham In Tuesday Intermediate Shinny

Though playing a brand of hockey that wasn't quite up to the mark, the Newmarket Reds managed to hold the aggressive Markham team to a two-all tie on Tuesday night at the Markham arena.

Considering the small ice surface and the condition of the ice, perhaps the Reds didn't do such a bad job against their heavier opponents.

Fans are expected to be out in force tonight to see these two teams stage their return game on the Newmarket arena. Newmarket has to fight tonight if the Redmen are to keep out of the cellar, and the game should be a good one.

Play opened fast with the Newmarket team being the aggressors for the first 10 minutes of play. However, the Markham team put on a few ganging attacks which usually ended at the Newmarket goal mouth.

During one of the scrambles a Markham man batted the puck behind Peters to put the home-owners one up. This goal gave the Markham team more life and they swarmed all over the ice for the remainder of the period but were held off the score sheet.

The second period was practically a repetition of the first, with both teams checking hard. As a result, a real shinny match followed. Hodggets, Newmarket defenceman, gave the Newmarket team more hope when he rushed single-handed, driving a hard shot from just inside the defence that nicked the twine.

Markham pressed harder than ever then and in their aggressiveness drew a penalty. The Reds tried to take advantage of the Markham defenceman, broke away clear and went in alone on Peters to score Markham's second and last goal. No further damage resulted in this period.

The third period provided the extra man and the whole team played forward, but Armstrong, worst shinny of the night, with both teams being satisfied to golf the puck anywhere to get it out of the road. The Markham team seemed to hold an edge all the way through, keeping the puck in Newmarket's zone. However, Heaney and May broke away from a ganging attack, Heaney carrying the puck and pulling the goalie to one side and laid a perfect pass on May's stick which the latter made no mistake on.

This goal tied the score and although no more scoring was done, both teams had numerous chances but seemed to be a little over-anxious when in around the net. Roberts and Peat on the Newmarket defence played heads-up hockey, as did Hodggets, alternate defenceman. Up front Townsley, Tran and Draper were in the limelight, Draper having to retire from the game in the second period with a further injury to his knee. Peters, in goal, gave all that could be expected.

Teams—Markham: goal, Gooderham; defence, Burrows and Armstrong; centre, Shepstone; wings, Madill and Megill; alternates, Lentic, Robinson, Couperthwaite, Trotter and Hare.

Newmarket: goal, Peters; defence, Roberts and Peat; centre, Townsley; wings, Tran and Bennett; alternates, Heaney, Draper, McCabe and May.

Referee: Bert McCaffrey.

Greenshirts Battle To 4-3 Victory Over Bradford Team

Sutton Greenshirts defeated Bradford intermediates by a 4-3 score in the fastest game of the season in Sutton Monday night. Despite mild weather during the day, the ice was fast and both teams put on a brilliant display of hockey as the 4-3 score attests.

Burchell opened the scoring for Sutton, near the end of the initial period, on a shot from the blue line. The period saw fast hockey displayed by both teams. Milroy, main stumbling block for the Bradford squad, was easily the best on the ice.

The combination play was much improved and the absence of Culverwell on the left boards was quite noticeable.

Milroy scored in the second period on a pass inside the blue line on which the goal-tender had little chance.

As play resumed the teams began to show signs of strain and the play became rougher as the Bradford team put on a final attempt and tied up the score. Pandle, who played with Whitby last year, starred for Bradford and scored the three goals which the visitors earned.

During the final stanza Milroy scored twice, once on a pass and, on the other occasion, on a solo effort.

During the final period a questionable body-check by Shupe earned in an argument which ended in a short rest in the penalty box. The visitors have a fine team and are sure to give any of the teams a real argument for the O. H. A. group title.

The game was much faster than the one played here last week. Fans saw plenty of body-checking and penalties, the majority of the latter going to the local team.

Teams—Sutton Greenshirts: goal, L. Smith; defence, Bill Burkholder and A. Shupe; centre, Milroy; wings, C. Carpenter and J. Culverwell; subs, C. Brady, A. McKenzie, J. Schmidt, J. Crezier, H. Burchell and L. O'Dell.

Bradford: goal, Seim; defence, Urig and Hunter; centre, Lang; wings, Nesbitt and Ogilvie; subs, Randall, Hunt, McEwen, West, and James.

IT IS A CHALLENGE!

By Leonard Harman

Pickering College presents the people of York county with a challenge. Do we accept it?

Headmaster Joe McCulley has made an announcement of a new service in adult education. He has said in effect: "Go forth and help your people to help themselves. Here is assistance in getting started."

It is most gratifying to find an educational institution coming out of its shell and attempting to promote a creative project in the surrounding countryside. As one leading educationalist has said: "The schools must help save civilization if they themselves are to survive. They must help advance civilization if they are to go forward." Because its headmaster is convinced of the truth of this statement, this school at Newmarket is launching upon a new stage in its progressive activities, a stage even more significant than was the holding of the first Community Life Conference six years ago.

Acting in accord with the college's avowed philosophy of education for a more co-operative way of life and in response to popular request, we have chosen a study of co-operation as our chief interest. The first material recommended for study is a bulletin by Carl R. Hutchinson, entitled "Seeking a New World Through Co-operatives." Copies may be bought from the secretary for 30 cents each, or they may be borrowed for a short time.

Existing community organizations such as church groups and others have already adopted the course of study. If you have not an organization in your community which will carry on such activity it is our purpose to help you form such in body. Concentrated study in small groups meeting weekly is the first essential. Once a month all these groups will convene at Pickering college for a district meeting.

MOUNT PLEASANT SAND STORM IS LATEST FREAK

AURORA TRIMS YORK JUNIORS

The game between the Aurora and East York juniors in Aurora on Friday turned out to be a grand one for everyone except the East Yorkers. The game started slowly, with the whistle blowing steadily all through the first period.

East York got the first goal, but Aurora tied it up before the whistle had called the players for their first rest-up.

The second period saw much better hockey. The Aurora puck-chasers showed much better combination, and the best efforts of the East Yorkers failed to hold the score below the 4-1 mark in this round.

East York, in a dying rally, managed to bulge the Aurora twine for the second time, and the Aurorans, in retaliation, turned the rink into a shooting gallery, rifling in no less than five goals in this period to take a 9-2 win.

Shorty Wrightman of Newmarket, assisted by his fellow townsman, Bill Wilson, accounted for three of the Aurora goals.

LOCAL THEATRE FEATURES LEWIS' "DODSWORTH" FILM

As a novel Sinclair Lewis "Dodsworth" was a best-seller. Adapted to the stage by Sidney Howard, with Walter Huston in the title role, it was a smash stage hit and ran almost two years on Broadway.

Now, translated into celluloid by the same writer, with Walter Huston again playing Sam Dodsworth and given a magnificent production by Samuel Goldwyn, "Dodsworth" has found its ideal form.

Combining all the best features of the book and the play, and adding several of its own, "Dodsworth" emerges on the screen of the Palace Theatre Friday and Saturday, Jan. 22 and 23, as the finest piece of entertainment appearing there in many months.

Aurora Towners Tie With Collis Leather In Tuesday Game

In the third double-header of the mercantile hockey league at the Aurora arena on Tuesday, the Office Specialty team defeated Sisman Shoe Co. 2-1 in the first game of the evening and Collis Leather Co. played a 2-2 tie with the Aurora town team. The win on Tuesday gave the Office Specialty the lead in the group as they have won all three games played.

In the first game of the night Office Specialty opened the scoring in the first period when H. Brammer tallied on a pass from "Buck" Bond. The Sisman Shoe Co. tied the count near the end of the period when Cooper scored on a combination play with Heaney.

In the second period both goal-tenders had plenty of work, stopping many hard shots, and kept the teams from having any scoring in this period.

In the final session the checking was very close but with about 5 minutes to go, Aub. Barker put the Specialty into the lead. Though Sisman's tried hard to even up the count, the local boys held them off.

The Specialty have a really smart squad and should be right in the running for the championship all through the season. The final score was: Office Specialty, 2; Sisman Shoe Co., 1.

Teams—Office Specialty: goal, J. Tunny; defence, Buck Bond, Red Waller and Aub. Barker; centre, W. Wilson; wings, H. Brammer and Aub. Ray; alternates, J. O'Halloran, C. Giles and Wes. Niles.

Sisman Shoe Co.: goal, W. Chapman; defence, Hackings and Pattenden; centre, F. Heaney; wings, Cooper and Clubine; alternates, Nesbitt, White, Hallman and Judd.

In the second game, the Aurora town team played a 2-2 tie with the Collis Leather Co. The Towners opened the scoring in the first period with Bernard getting the credit, but before the end of the period Seaton scored for Collis Leather on a pass from Hodgkinson, to make the score 1-1.

In the second period, K. Davis put the town in the lead, but a few minutes later the Collis team tied up the count at 2-2 when Hodgkinson scored on a pass from Seaton.

In the final period, both teams played a close checking game and neither team was able to score. Final score: Aurora Town team, 2; Collis Leather, 2.

Teams—Collis Leather Co.: goal, Dawson; defence, Fleury and Ferguson; centre, Hodgkinson; wings, Seaton and Smith; alternates, Anderson, McGhee, Wade and Yakes.

Town of Aurora: goal, Yakes; defence, Rose and Rawlings; centre, J. Mathewson; wings, Bernard and Davis; alternates, Richards, Flicker, White and Anderson.

DISCOVER BREAK IN HYDRO WIRE

There has been considerable high wind lately. At the shore of lake Simcoe, a tree was broken. It fell on the hydro wire, breaking it off. Before daylight, Harland Huntley, noticing a light near the Cedarholme cottage, went over to solve the mystery. Finding the breakage, he phoned to headquarters. Repairs were made soon.

A number of people in the neighborhood have been having heavy colds.

Mrs. Duke Horner is in poor health at present, but somewhat improving. There is sickness in the home of Albert Edney, little Eleanor has pneumonia.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Pegg are out of school.

The M. and M. service at Bethel on Sunday morning was explained by Rev. T. V. Hart. There were not as many present as usual, owing to the sickness in the neighborhood.

Friends of Mrs. John Morton were pleased to see her at church on Sunday morning.

The supper in community hall on Wednesday under the auspices of the Y. P. S. and choir, was very highly spoken of, not only the supper, but the "Welcome to the old home town tonight." Those taking part all did their parts very well.

For 52 years Captain Charles Henry Tufford sailed the great lakes. In 1926, at the age of 69, he retired and bought a small plot of land near Bradford where he has made his home since that time.

The captain, on Friday, celebrates his 80th birthday. In all the years he sailed, Captain Tufford was never forced to abandon ship though he experienced many bad storms and had a few close calls.

All best wishes for many more happy years are extended to the captain.

FLOWERS AT HER FEET

By MARIE BLIZARD

COPYRIGHT: RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Alix Carey, who came to New York to find work in an advertising agency following her parents' death, has made a close friend of Kathleen Crosby whom she met in a swimming pool.
Kathleen, who is well to do, has invited Alix to a party and introduced her to Kim Preston, her second cousin. While Kim adores Alix, her thoughts wander to John Sayre, young executive of her agency. Alix submits a slogan in a $500
contest conducted among employees of the agency. Kathleen and Alix discuss love and Alix hints of her feelings for John Sayre.

(Now go on with the story)

CHAPTER 5
"I can't answer for myself," Kathleen said in answer to Alix's question about being in love with a man you did not really know.
"I don't think one person is ever qualified to be judicial about such things in regard to another.
Perhaps, I could. I don't know.
Our approaches to love depend on forces and circumstances.
Perhaps if I were a dreamer, a romanticist, I might. Are you a dreamer, Alix?"

"I can't answer that question," Kathleen guessed I look like one."
"You do. Sometimes you sit and muse and it seems that your spirit has gone away to far places
and you must be recalled."

Dora Carey used to say that whether Alix was thinking of a meat course for lunch or was lost in a flight of fancy, she wore that look of misty-eyed dreaming and her mouth parted in the same half smile.

"I'm practical if that's what you mean," Alix said presently.
"I don't dream of impossible things. (Wasn't dreaming of John Sayre impossible?) I do go off in searching journeys sometimes trying to find a way to make something of my life. Oh, Kathleen, I can't be a secretary forever, taking notes, opening mail, writing letters. An automobile's life is a dreary one."
"But what do you want to do?"
Kathleen probed.

"There are lots of things I'd like to do but I have no training, no means of knowing what I can do. When I had to go to work to earn my own living, there was no time to prepare for a creative career which I wanted. There was only enough money and time for me to go to a secretarial school. I'd like to have gone to an art school, learned to write, learned to create. I envy the girls in the advertising agency who do that. I guess my trouble is I lack direction. I like too many things. I could be happy writing, sketching, decorating, but—she shrugged her shoulders—"someday I'll find the thing I want to do."

"I know how you feel. The need in people to create things, to do some work gives one purpose. Alix, I have it, too.
Cousin Helen—that's Kim's mother—has a cottage at Easthampton and she wants me to spend the summer there. But I'm doing some cataloguing for father and it gives me such a pleasant, satisfactory feeling to know that I'm doing some work.
Look here, I've been trying my hand at some sculpturing. See what you think of it." Kathleen walked across the room and brought back a board covered with tiny molded figures in plasticine.

"Kathleen, what fun!" Alix bent over the board and studied the figures. Her eyes danced with merriment.
"Don't tell me," she said quickly. "Don't tell me what they are. I know . . . they're—she looked up hesitatingly. "Are they . . . ? Isn't this the Philosopher and this," she touched the second figure—"his wife,
The Thin Woman, and this is Pan . . . ?"

"The Crock of Gold!" Kathleen said solemnly and held out her right hand to Alix. "You're the only person who ever recognized them. This is the beginning of a beautiful friendship, Alix, my girl. You liked it, didn't you?"

"I like everything James Stephens ever wrote. Do you know his charming poem to all small creatures?"
It was one o'clock and Kathleen and Alix were still exploring each other's minds, delighted by the harmony of tastes they found.

"It's a very satisfactory way to have fun, molding this stuff," Kathleen said, picking up one of the small figures. "I'll show you how."

"And I'll show you something else that's fun," Alix promised.
"I'll show you how to build and decorate rooms out of cardboard and tin and bits of ribbon. It was a game I used to play when I was a little girl."

"What a night!" said the Kathleen, who was sitting up for Kim's play.

not doubt that."
"I think I'd like it," Alix answered as she pulled on her hat.

Kathleen couldn't find any words.
The hour was late, but driving down Fifth Avenue the taxi she could ill afford. Alix mused happily on the broadening sphere of her activity. She anticipated being with Kim and Kathleen, making a game of plays and stage sets exactly as she had when she was a small girl giving,
impartially, her attention to both.
But it was Kathleen to whom she gave affection as well as friendship.

She didn't know that this childish game was already a force that was to change her life, to open doors upon new paths—paths that were to disturb two people briefly and involve all the important issues in her own life.

"Well," she said, arriving at the office a few minutes late on the morning of the thirtieth,
"who won the big prize, Mr.
Kennelly?"

"Don't know yet," he answered and forgot to ask her why she was late. There was an air of expectancy in the office. This was the long awaited day of the slogan contest and it was difficult for a moment to pretend that he was sure a Mr.
Smith was going to win the prize
when he was quite sure that it was already his.

Lunch time came and went and still there was no news of when or how it would be done.
"Perhaps it will be announced in the inter-office mail," they said, or "Maybe the winner was notified and that's all there is to it."

At four-thirty a page made the rounds asking each employee to remain for 10 minutes after closing time, and to meet in the conference room.

Brushing her hair upwards
into two wings above her forehead, touching a puff lightly to her smooth skin, Alix found she had no need for rouge. A petal of pink lay lightly on either cheek.

Her heart wasn't merely beating, it was thumping with excitement. This was going to be a big moment for someone. She hoped the winner would be someone of the senior executives.

As for herself, it was enough for her that she was to be in the conference room. John Sayre would be there to award the prize. He wouldn't be just walking with his quick step through the corridors. It would be enough to sit quietly and look at him and listen to him.

"High school girl stuff," she murmured to herself with ad-monishment and hitched the seams of her sheer stockings straight.
Paul Kennelly, she saw, was seated in one of the front rows.
She sat down at the back of the room. A door opened and Mr.
Coulton entered.

It gave him great pleasure, he said, and talked for 10 minutes about the teamwork of his "fine young people."

John Sayre wasn't there.
" . . . and now," Mr. Coulton was saying, "you've all done a fine job. I wish to congratulate all of you and I know that, in turn, you will wish to congratulate our winner. The prize winning slogan, selected by a board of judges—in no way connected with the agency—awards
the prize to Miss Alix Carey for her slogan: 'For the Rest of Your Life.'"

Alix sat in her chair dumb-founded until hands drew her up.
She heard the applause, the cheers, and some of what Mr.
Coulton was saying, accepted the check with a small "thank you"
and in the same utterance walked back to her office.

There were more congratulations there and at last she began to realize what had happened to her. She smiled to those on her left and those on her right, but she had no words. And when the telephone rang she was grateful for that normal interruption.

"Hello," she said. "Mr. Kennelly's office."
"This is Mr. Sayre's office. Is this Miss Carey?" Alix said she was. "Mr. Sayre would like to see you at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning."

CHAPTER 6
At one minute of 10, John Sayre's secretary said, "Go right in, Miss Carey."

Alix crossed the carpeted room and put her small white hand in the deeply tanned one John Sayre held out to her.

"Congratulations," he said, and his bright smile lingered as he bowed her into a chair beside his desk.

"Thank you, Mr. Sayre." She sat in the chair. It felt wide and deep. She slid to the edge of it and sat very straight.

"Big thrill?" he asked.
"Very big," she answered and meant more than the question asked.

Then she smiled, the slow,
sweet way she had smiled at Kim.
John Sayre was only 36 and he promptly forgot the next question
he had meant to ask her.

"What are you going to do with it?" he asked for no particular reason, drawing his eyes reluctantly from her dark blue ones framed in the longest lashes
he had ever seen. ("Except Carola's," he thought. "And those go on in a beauty salon.")

"Don't you remember how you felt?"
He did, and he liked her feeling that the prize was not the important thing.

"Tell me about it," he said,
and gestured vaguely. "Tell me how you arrived at your slogan."
"Do you mean, how did I work
it out?"
He did.

Alix felt that she ought to be able to tell him that she had read all the material on the product, that she had worked over phrases, choosing and eliminating, but since she hadn't, she said:

"There isn't very much to tell you, I heard Mr. . . . I heard someone trying to work one out with the word that was quite the opposite of rest and when I thought of the word 'rest,' the rest of the phrase just popped into my mind."

"Good," he said. "I like that.
Is that the way most of your ideas come?"
Alix wondered if he knew that she had suggested the booklet
for the Jasmine Perfume company to Paul Kennelly. Or that she had planned the college campaign for Madison Modes.
She'd done those by what she called her "popping into my head" process.

Feeling that that was anything but the right way, she said she did.

Alix was utterly surprised.
Surely he wouldn't call her to his office to congratulate her and take the occasion to let her know that her services were unsatisfactory!

"Mr. Kennelly told me this morning that you've been helping him with one or two of his accounts."

"He really didn't mind," she said quickly, and John Sayre bridge contest. "Did I?" she had said and had gone on talking about something else.

He put the telephone back on its stand and rang for his secretary.
"Ask Mrs. Holworthy to come in if she isn't busy," he said.
Agnes Holworthy was 50, brilliant, brittle and kind. She was the copy chief in charge of women's accounts. John Sayre had asked her to show Alix Carey the way to her new work. The salary, she told Alix, was $45 a week. Then she gave her some work and good advice.

"Don't take it so hard," Mrs.
Holworthy said a month later.
"You're doing all right. Mr.
Gordon was particularly pleased with the way you handled the Crozier account. I think I'll let you handle the whole thing."

So, Alix fitted quietly, surely into her new position, into the change that had come in her life.
For there were other changes.
Through Kathleen—and Kim—
her social world was growing.
She had a modest apartment to which she invited her new friends for little suppers. Kim had, as Kathleen had predicted, pursued her and to him she owed
many grand times.

In September she was no longer a newcomer to the copy department. It was the month the Warner Fabric company, manufacturers of synthetic decorative fabrics, became a new account.
The copy department buzzed with ideas in the making.

John Sayre said he wanted to hear all of them personally and at once.

. . . and if you could engage McGrath, the modern designer who had the show at the "Big thrill?"

wondered what he had said to bring quick concern to that lovely face.

"Of course, he didn't," Sayre fingered a bronze ash tray on his desk. "Do you like to write copy? Does the creation of advertising ideas appeal to you?"

He wasn't sure, even as he said it, that he had intended to say it when he had inquired about this prize winner.

"Oh, yes," she leaned forward and quick color flushed her cheeks. She moistened her lips with the tip of her tongue. "I
 . . . I think it's the most absorbing She didn't go on because she was embarrassed.
But John Sayre had read her enthusiasm.

He sat back and regarded her.
"She won't last," he was thinking. "She's too pretty. She'll work hard and train hard and just when she is of some value, she'll marry an artist or one of the other copy writers." But aloud he said:

"Miss Carey"—he wondered what her first name was—"there's another reward that goes with the winning of the slogan contest. The agency wishes to make a gesture of appreciation.
It's a promotion to the copy

Alix sat back and caught her two hands together. It was an unconscious, childish gesture she adopted because they trembled so.

"I am to be promoted to the copy department?"
He smiled at her and stood up.
He was afraid if she stayed any longer he'd ask her who she was,
where she came from, and what she wanted to do. He might even ask her (in a kindly way, he thought) if she were married. So were these days.

Alix stood up, too.
"Mrs. Holworthy," he said.
"She'll tell you all about it. Can you be ready to start Monday?"

Alix nodded her head. Yes, indeed. But, she simply couldn't thank him then.

At the door she said, "Thank
you. I hope you won't be sorry."
"I know I won't. Good luck,"
he said, and looked at the door
when she had closed it and at the little shoes had left in the carpet.

"Pretty child," he said, and

THE FURROW'S END

BY
LEONARD HARMAN

Such is the title of our little booklet of 62 pages which has been chosen as the first study material in connection with the college community extension. The author is a young man in his thirties whom we met last October in Columbus, Ohio. He is now acting as one of the men on full time educational work with the Ohio farm bureau.

The whole approach of the author is from the angle of Christian citizenship. In his introduction he states, as an objective, that we should "seek to understand how to develop a social and economic order in which we can practice the sermon and business, in our producing and using the goods of life." This project is part of the program, Christian Youth Building a New World, in which fifty denominations and agencies are co-operating. Throughout the whole booklet there runs continual references to Christian ethics as a test for human motive and action.

Six chapters contain an analysis of present conditions, a brief history and explanation of the co-operative movement, a criticism of it, and suggestions as to its application.

Some short descriptions of other economic systems are presented.

This booklet lends itself very well to discussion purposes. It is not hard to follow. If the leader has studied it previously he should have no difficulty in arousing and maintaining interest in the subject matter.

A blackboard may be used to advantage in introducing discussion. At a meeting on the first chapter one might commence by asking for a list of undesirable features in our present social and economic order. By the time the group has named several of these a lively discussion will probably be under way.

EAST GWILLIMBURY COUNCIL PASS RELIEF MOTIONS

East Gwillimbury council held its inaugural meeting in Sharon hall on Jan. 11, with all members present.

Reeve J. S. Osborne addressed the council and brief speeches were made by Deputy-Reeve Byron Stiver, Councillors Alan Shaw, Walter Proctor and George Pearson. The council then adjourned until the afternoon session.

Employers requiring workers may now apply to the commission and receive a man for any necessary length of time.

The motion passed by the 1936 council to the effect that those asking for relief from the police villages be approved by the trustees was rescinded. Relief administration should be left entirely to the relief officers, it was decided.

Authority was given to the clerk to issue tax deeds to those applying for them on the 1935 tax sale.

It was decided to place a valuation of $1,500 on the municipal hall, $300 on the clerk's office equipment and $3,405 on machinery.

The

Newmarket Era

funny it is really no joke. Men have to make an honest living. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lepard of Orrville were visiting old friends and neighbors one day last week. Mr. and Mrs. I. N. King were visiting Mrs. Ernest Morton on Saturday.

Mr. Willie Purdy is spending a few days with his mother, Mrs. P. Purdy.

Last week there were items put in the paper that were not true. Those who write should be very careful that no news that is not fact should be sent to the editors as this may lead to serious trouble.

What serious times our fishermen have been having owing to mild weather and high wind.

There are still a lot of little people under the doctor's care. It is hoped that with the colder weather they will soon be restored to their usual good health.

Mrs. Taylor of Uxbridge has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Freeman Pollock.

Mrs. E. Wilder is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Alward Marritt.

Miss E. Stuart of Newmarket was the guest on Sunday of Miss King, Golden Age Farm.

Mr. Art Pollock, Mr. Albert Marritt and Mr. Alward Marritt attended a banquet in Toronto last week.

Mr. Perry Winch is ill. A very speedy recovery is hoped for.

Mrs. W. Henry of Queensville is not well.

PINE ORCHARD

CLUB MEETS TO STUDY AUTHORS

The Pine Orchard club held their meeting last week at the home of James Hope. A paper on Canadian authors, their lives and works, formed the evening's program.

Last Thursday afternoon Mrs. Gordon Stevens had quite a large quilting party. Those invited were: Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Hope, Mrs. John Reid, Mrs. Wm. Reid, Miss Leta Hawtin and Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. Frank Playter of town. The hostess served a beautiful supper.

MINISTER TALKS ON AMUSEMENT

A representative and interested congregation gathered in Queensville Gospel Tabernacle last Sunday evening to hear Rev. John G. MacLeod, pastor, discuss the "Amusement Question."

"You may wonder why we have chosen cards, dances and theatres for this discussion," said the speaker. "It is because of their widespread popularity; because of the fascinations these things have in our day."

The preacher invited those present to hand in, or place on the plates, written questions to be publicly answered.

In making announcements, Mr. MacLeod emphasized the service at 7:30 p.m. next Sunday, when the subject of the sermon-lecture will be, "Love, Courtship and Marriage."

One definition of a philanthropist—A man who returns to the people publicly a small percentage of the wealth he steals from them privately.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Gen. Micks, who will celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary next Tuesday.

Distinguished Naturalist Tells Of His Brush Heaps

Dr. W. E. Saunders of London, Ont., Sends Era Bird Lore

Signal honor has come to The Era this week through the mail. Interested by The Era's interest in nature and particularly the bird column, "Chips and his Chums," Dr. W. E. Saunders, London, Ont., president of the Ontario Federation of Naturalists, one of Canada's most distinguished naturalists, has mailed The Era three of his own current weekly contributions to the London Free Press.

Dr. Saunders is a member of an outstanding and widely known Canadian family. His father, Dr. Wm. Saunders, was the founder of the dominion government experimental farm at Ottawa. A brother of Dr. W. E. Saunders, Sir Charles Saunders, now retired from the dominion civil service is the father of the Marquis, Renown and Garnet wheats which have established Canada's supremacy in world wheat markets. Other members of the family are distinguished in other lines of endeavor.

The three articles, which appear under the heading "Nature Week by Week," forwarded by Dr. Saunders, are as follows:

Five Hundred Birds Killed

The total number of birds killed at the Long Point Lighthouse on Oct. 7, 1936, was 501, divided among 40 species. The most abundant family was that of the warblers, of whom there were 259 individuals in 19 species, 187 sparrows in 10 species, 31 Vireos in three species, 15 thrushes in three species, two each of two species of kinglets, four scarlet tanagers, one cuckoo and one woodpecker. These numbers doubtless represent pretty well the assortment of birds that were migrating at that date, with the exception of those that fly mainly in daylight, and those that have the ability to evade lighthouse dangers.

The migration of any one species does not occur all at once, in fact, some birds spread their travels over as much as four months, as is witnessed by the marsh hawk. I banded four young of this species in Middlesex during August, and one of them was shot in Florida in mid-October. We see them crossing the lake at Point Pelee in early September, and the late J. S. Wallace saw a large crossing on December 24, showing that their migration period covers four months. Most birds pass through in a shorter time, and are often in large numbers together.

The most abundant bird in this tragedy was the Maryland yellow-throat, of which there were 79. Then, going down the scale in the warbler family there were 44 myrtles, which had arrived here only a few days before, 30 orange-crowns which are so elusive that few of us see more than one or two in a season, and quite frequently we miss them altogether; 22 ovenbirds, that warbler which belongs to what is called the waterthrush group, 13 palm, 13 black-throated blue, 11 black-throated green, seven blackpoll, five each of Blackburnian, Parula, black and white and Nashville, four Tennessee, three Magnolia, two Connecticut, and one each of pine, redstarts, mourning and yellow-breasted chat. The chat is one of the really rare birds of Ontario, and this is the first one to be found among the dead at Long Point. It lives along the north shore of Lake Erie, and has been found at London about half a dozen times.

Constituting the 10 species of sparrows were 54 white-throats, 38 Savannahs, 34 white-crowns, 26 each of swamp and Lincoln, three each grasshopper and Indigo, and one each of song, Junco and Nelson's sharpshin. This last was the real find, and Long Point is the second locality in this part of Ontario where it has been found. It is a migrant from the north and west. In the north it has been found only at Mooseonee and it is possible that this bird and all the several records from Toronto come from that locality; in the west it is widespread and often common. It has yet to be found in this county. The single song sparrow causes thought. Ontario is a fount of abundance for this species, and surely there were quite a number migrating just then, but only one was killed, and moreover, very few have been found on previous occasions. They do not cross the lake in the daytime and one may well wonder why more of them were not killed. Three species of Vireos included one Philadelphia, five blue heads and 28 redbreasts; thrushes were two olive-backed, seven hermits, and six of the rare gray cheek; two each of the ruby crown and golden crown kinglets, four tanagers, and one each of the yellow-bellied sapsuckers and yellow-billed cuckoo complete the list.

Many years ago the lighthouse between Pelee Island and Point Pelee had a number of similar disasters, but I understand this ceased some time ago. Also, the lighthouse off Parry Sound, called the Red Rock, has killed some, but I have no recent information that any other than the Long Point light is now a danger to migrating birds.

The A B C of Bird Feeding

So many people feed birds in our city, that their number is probably up in the hundreds, and yet there are very many who fail to get from this activity the fun that they are entitled to. It should not be necessary to say that the enjoyment of wild life is one of the great privileges of the human race, yet there are many people who think so little of their opportunities that they add to their total of joy almost nothing from their contact with the birds; some of them perhaps not having even the most casual acquaintance with any but the most common. And success in the effort to make their acquaintance comes so easily, so enjoyable and costs so little in time, effort or money, that those of us whose chief pleasures come from a contact with nature become almost irritated at the thought of anyone failing in that respect. How like is our attitude to that of others (golfers?) who get great joy out of a hobby in which many others do not share.

Now is the time to make a start as far as the birds are concerned, for while we must make the effort of going out to see them in the summer, winter is the time when we may have them at the dining-room window, and they will come there while we ourselves are there, and so they help to make meal-time a pleasure, and thus, doubtless, aid digestion. Real bird people seldom need any aid for digestion for their walks attend to that.

One step in the attracting of birds to a garden, is to have a shrubby garden, and many people lack that point. In that case, one may create a substitute in the form of a brush heap. Such a thing is one of the greatest attractions we can have in the garden, and, for myself, I have found it very necessary that my neighbors' trees should be pruned in the autumn when I want my brush heap; and it is a great tribute to human kindness that my neighbors so often agree with me. In this pile I throw corn, sunflower and millet seeds and the birds come to feed there with feelings of great safety, for neither a cat, nor dog, nor hawk can make its way through the branches with sufficient speed to catch a small bird.

Near this heap should go the food sticks, and these should be of various designs, but the consideration of these things must be left until next week.

Golden-Eye Ducks

A recent visit to Port Stanley disclosed the first flock of any kind sizable flock of ducks since last summer. They were in the outer harbor, and consisted of about 100, almost all of them were Golden-eyes, the one exception being a lone Merganser, probably a Red Breasted, as far as could be made out. Other ducks have been seen this year, but always in small numbers.

Brush Heaps Donated

Noticing that the public utilities are trimming and removing trees I have inquired about the disposal of the branches and the general manager tells me that they are anxious to get rid of them and that a part load will be delivered to anyone applying, just as soon as it is convenient for the drivers to be in that locality. I myself am one of the first to be favored in this regard, and my brush heap is much augmented, to the great satisfaction of the birds.

The A B C of Bird Feeding

Having got your brush-heap, which was the subject of last week's article, the next thing is to provide food in the right way. What the birds would like is fresh grubs, but that is asking too much. So we must aim at an acceptable substitute, of which there are two, ready to hand—fat and nuts.

Suet or other fat meat may be bought in hunks, which are tied around the middle with a string, a loop of which is then slipped over a very short twig, and the lump then dropped over the nearest branch; the tension on the cord will hold it in place under most circumstances. That is the very first offering. Chickadees, woodpeckers and nuthatches are to be expected at such a lump, and then the second step is to make a slab perhaps 20 inches long, with six inches at one end cut off at each side, leaving a projection half to three-quarters of an inch wide and six inches long.

Then pass some peanuts or other nuts through a meat chopper, mix them with ground suet, and pass the mixture through again and this freshly ground mixture will adhere to any rough surface when pressed on with the hand.

was provided for our raccoons so they could get up into the tree at Springbank, and it has been abandoned. Chickadees and other birds invert themselves and feed with the greatest comfort in that position, and can hang on to the food itself. Care must be used to keep the food in from the edge, for the sparrows will reach over from above and get pieces off and every sparrow helps to make the place less attractive to the native birds.

A socket is then made, into which the projection of the slab will fit, making it easy to take down the slab when it needs refilling. The socket is then nailed into the tree where the lumps of fat swing, and the birds find it at once and feed from it readily. Having found that slabs contain food, they will come to such a slab when it is put up near the dining-room window. The socket may be nailed to the side of the house, or a post may be put up on which a couple of them may offer their wares. Such a post is a poor imitation of a tree, but when food is there, the birds will not question the absence of roots which they could not see anyway, nor of leaves which they do not find in winter, nor the bark which would have helped them to hang on to while they feed.

From such a slab it is easy to hang a perpendicular feeding stick. In it may be bored a number of holes and these should be plugged full of the fat and nut mixture, which is very pliable, when it has just passed through the grinder. Woodpeckers especially prefer to eat while hanging on perpendicularly, and the others like it also, but the starlings are baffled and sparrows have a hard time to get the food away from the wood. It seems that they have never learned the trick of hammering at the food, their bill being unsuited to do so; they try all sorts of stunts to separate small pieces from the mass, and their success is usually negligible.

It is, of course, permissible to put out the food on a board or a window sill, but sparrows and starlings will congregate on it and prevent the natives from getting their quota; and our labors will be lost. Moreover, when snow falls, the food will not be available. I offer food to the sparrows, but not exactly what they would like. On an elevated bird bath, now full of ice, I lay corn, sunflower and a little millet seed, and the sparrows think well of my efforts, but on this day of writing, such food was covered by the snow and when I went out to place some more I found footprints where they had hunted in vain. Bluejays come sometimes, and I hear that some people are much bothered by this large bird keeping smaller ones from the food.

In speaking of the hanging stick I forgot to mention that drilling holes in a piece of elm or maple is hard work and slow; but if one goes to a woods where birches grow, he can often pick up a piece of birch two or three inches in diameter which has been dead for a couple of years, and such a piece, while attractive to the birds because of the bark on it, is fast decaying inside and is very readily drilled to hold the food.

(3) The old remedy was quinine and whiskey, but quinine has been displaced by aspirin and those who take whiskey usually take it with soda instead. Generally going into a warm bed and taking copious hot drinks with five or ten grains of aspirin and one-half grain of codeine will give the patient prompt relief and, in favorable cases, he will be well away to recovery in a day or so. In severe cases it is better to play safe and call in your family doctor."
